In March of 4828 the canal commis doners directed their president and oute for a read from the Susquehanna at Harrisburg to Chambersburg, and eport on the practicability of the extenon of that by way of Gettysberg to Fork. They did as directed, and had a epart com the engineer in the ensuing anuary. In April of 1831 Governor Volf approved the act incorporating the Comberland Valley rastroad company, which act provided that work on the aad should begin within three years and be Enished within seven. Subscriptions the stock were like hens teeth, few nd far between, and it was necessary to beg the legislatore for an extension of ime, which was granted. That was i 1835, and by June of that year enough noney was in band to start the under taking, and by October W. Milnor oberts, chief engineer, render 1 a remt of the servey between Harrisburg

Precisely when he struck on the idea of the Tapeworm there is nothing at hand to tell, though that is not material; perhaps in 1837, since it was in January of 1808 that the committee of the legislature reported in favor of the Cumberland Valley. The Tapeworm was a part of the public works of the state. In May of 1838 he had himself appointed a member of the board of canal commissioners and then had himself elected president of it, which had in charge the fortunes of the Tapeworm. The completion of it would be good for the ore land and th construction of it would increase the amount of patronage, which would be

Stevens was one of his right hand men; according to one authority, Stevens was his master, but prejudices remain long after the occasion of them has passed away. Too much confidence should not be reposed in such authorities. Thaddens vas dead set against the purchase o locomotives for the Philadelphia and Columbia, because thereby the control of the road would pass to the canal commissioners and they would have patron age to distribute, whereby the people would be corrupted and our free institutions endangered. The Democrats were n power then. In 1838 the Anti-Masonic Ritner was in the governor's chair and patronage was perfectly proper; indeed, a means of preserving the purity of the people and strengthening our free in-
